Statement from National Postal Mail Handlers Union President Paul V. Hogrogian on House passage of the Protecting the Right to Organize (PRO) Act, H.R. 842

Recent economic studies have shown what all NPMHU members and all of our union brother and sisters have known our entire careers: the right to unionize allows the working class greater personal economic growth; improves workplace safety; and, combatted income inequality.

Despite these benefits to the fiscal health of our national economy, federal laws were not strong enough to ensure members of the private sector have access to unions and the right to organize.

To overcome these issues, the House introduced the Protecting the Right to Organize (PRO), H.R. 842, at the beginning of the 117th congressional session. The PRO Act strengthens the National Labor Relations Act by: protecting workers from anti-union intimidation and retaliation; preventing employers from preventing employees from organizing because of misclassification; and, ensuring unions can hold free and fair elections.

The House passed identical legislation in the 116th Congress, and I'm pleased that it had the same support in the 117th. With this continual support in the House, as well and the endorsement of President Biden, I urge the Senate to quickly take up this important legislation.
